EXECUTIVE MEMORANDA

The CIA: Nobody Knows

THE CIA ITEM in Government Executive's NATIONAL SECURITY section in the October issue (p. 19) has set off what has been described as a witch hunt to determine the source of the article. It is understood that the Inspector General was handed the problem.

It would seem more fruitful work to devote energies to identify and resolve the problems reported than to seek out for possible punitive purpose the people who surfaced them.

Caps and Gowns, not Cloaks and Daggers

CIA WOULD BE ABLE to staff any college in the United States from among its corps of analysts. Better than 50 percent of its professional employees have advanced degrees; 30 percent, doctorates. A majority of all the Agency's employees have earned a bachelor's degree, 16 percent hold master's degrees and five percent have attained Ph.D.'s. They comprise 281 major fields of specialization, the six most representative being history, political science, business administration, economics, English and international relations.
